Happy New Year!

Ants—and Men

Did you ever step on an ant hill, crushing to earth in a second the labor of a lifetime on the part of the colony of ants? What do they do? They immediately start to rebuild, as if nothing had happened and humans are a lot like that. That's what happened in the world of business: crushed . . . but only temporarily.

Today you and we—everyone in business is rebuilding and out of it all will come a bigger and better business. It is well to remember that when a concern is in business to stay and slowly but surely acquires a reputation for giving full value in the greatest measure it is equipped to weather the stress of depression.

None of us approve of depressions. We hate them. We are ashamed of them. We believe they are neither necessary nor inevitable . . . we believe they can and must be prevented.

The silver lining in this dark cloud is the fact that it has brought us closer to our regular customers. In practically every case we have been able to hold them. And now, that we are turning that well known "corner" you'll be buying gladly from us and we'll be buying gladly from some one else. Our stock is in splendid shape. We have tried in every way to anticipate the time when our customers will be sending in their orders. Let's get started.

ENGLISH IVY

FLORIST EXCHANGE, OCTOBER 17, 1931

No matter what else your customers may have done without during the last year or two, I am sure more jardinières, fancy pots, pans and crockery have been sold than ever before; each one of these calls for plants of some kind or other, and that means that as many English Ivies as ever, or more, will be used this coming Winter. Nor will the demand let up then, for we have call for them even during Summer, and every retail grower should manage to have on hand a good supply of Ivies, plants from 2½s on up to 5s and 6s, all the year 'round. Right now it's time to lift and pot up field plants to be placed along the edge of Carnation or other benches in a Carnation house temperature. If you are short of stock yourself, it's a good time to purchase either field plants or pot grown ones, and most of us have call not only for the regular kind, but also for the small leaved sort, such as the variegated form.

As with the Boston Fern, so with the English Ivy—both have the reputation of standing more abuse than most other house plants we might mention, and yet with many of our customers it is just a matter of a few weeks at best before we are called upon to replace such as have either been ruined by neglect or killed with kindness. From now on both ferns and Ivies are as much in demand as any other plants we carry, or more, and not only should we have a good assortment on hand, but we should also get ready with young stock coming on for next year. Most of us can purchase rooted Ivy cuttings far cheaper than we can do it ourselves, and November and December are the months to pot them up three to a 2½in. pot; carried in a cool house, they can remain in these pots until time for planting out next May.
